

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)
Regarding Protecting Survivors of Domestic and Other Interpersonal Violence or Abuse
During Shelter in Place

Issued: April 8, 2020

Issued by: Barbara J. Parker, Oakland City Attorney; Nancy E. O'Malley, Alameda County District Attorney

I. INTRODUCTION

In response to the current pandemic of novel coronavirus (“COVID-19”), on March 16, 2020 the Alameda County Public Health Department issued a Shelter-In-Place Order requiring Alameda County residents, including the residents of Oakland, to remain in their homes except for certain designated exceptions; the Department has since extended shelter-in-place requirements through May 3, 2020. In addition, on March 19, 2020 Governor Newsom issued an Executive Order requiring all California residents to shelter in place except for those working in or accessing certain essential businesses or services.

While these measures are necessary to slow the spread of COVID-19, they can pose serious risks for residents who are experiencing domestic and/or interpersonal violence while sheltering in place. These Frequently Asked Questions (“FAQs”) are intended to clarify the current shelter-in-place requirements as they relate to residents facing domestic or other interpersonal violence. Oakland City Attorney, Barbara J. Parker and Alameda County District Attorney, Nancy O'Malley jointly issue these FAQs.

Although the information provided below is current as of the time of issuance, this is a rapidly evolving situation. We will make our best efforts to keep an updated version of this document on our websites and will issue a new version of this document if there are significant changes in facts and circumstances.

II. FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

1. What are the definitions of interpersonal and domestic violence?

Answer: The World Health Organization broadly defines interpersonal violence as violence between individuals.¹ For purposes of these FAQs, interpersonal violence includes domestic violence, elder or dependent adult abuse, child abuse, and human trafficking.

The California Department of Public Health defines “domestic violence” as “a spectrum and often a pattern of behaviors that includes physical, sexual, verbal, emotional, and psychological abuse and/or economic control used by adults or adolescents against their current or former intimate partners.”² Intimate partners may or may not be cohabiting; may be of any gender identity; and include spouses, dating partners, and/or ongoing sexual partners. In the context of COVID-19, abusers may withhold, or threaten to withhold, necessary personal hygiene products like hand sanitizer, soap, or disinfectants; share misinformation about the pandemic to control or frighten survivors; threaten a person if they seek legal or service assistance; and/or threaten or prevent victims from seeking medical attention for symptoms.

Interpersonal violence is not limited to violence against intimate partners and also can include threatening to harm and/or harming children, parents, elders, and/or other close family members. Child and/or elder abuse often take similar form(s) as intimate partner violence, and commonly occur alongside intimate partner violence. Whether experienced by a partner, a child, a parent, an elder or dependent adult, cohabitant, and/or other family members or intimates, all of these forms of violence and abuse are prohibited by law.

Human trafficking involves compelling or coercing a person to provide labor or services, or to engage in commercial sex acts. The coercion can be subtle or overt, physical or psychological, and may involve the use of violence, threats, lies, or debt bondage.³

When the terms “interpersonal violence” and “domestic violence” are used in these FAQs, they are intended to encompass all the forms of violence or abuse described above, without regard to the identity, including gender identity or gender expression, of the alleged abuser(s) or the survivor(s).

2. Am I allowed to leave my residence if domestic or other interpersonal violence makes my home unsafe for me, my child, my pet, my parent, and/or another intimate or family member?

Answer: Yes. Under Alameda County’s shelter-in-place order, residents may leave their homes “to avoid domestic violence or child abuse.”⁴ This means that if your home is not a safe place for you and/or a loved one, you can leave and seek a safer place. In addition, residents may leave their homes to engage in activities “important to their health and safety, or to the health and safety of their family or household members (including, but not limited to, pets).”⁵ Important activities include accessing healthcare services as well as organizations that provide food, shelter, social services, and other necessities of life for “vulnerable populations.”⁶ The City of Oakland considers survivors of domestic or other interpersonal violence, and dependent family members and other intimates listed in FAQ #1, to be a vulnerable population for purposes of the shelter-in-place orders. Thus, survivors of domestic or other interpersonal violence may also leave home to access healthcare, shelter, and other support services for themselves and/or their loved ones.

3. Do the shelter-in-place requirements mean domestic violence shelters, crisis intervention, and other support services are closed?

Answer: No. Organizations that provide healthcare, food, shelter, child welfare, adult protective services, social and supportive services, and other necessities of life for vulnerable populations are exempted from the shelter-in-place orders issued by Alameda County and the Governor.⁷ In addition, the City of Oakland Human Services Department is continuing to provide homeless services, food, health, and medical services, and is continuing to administer payments to non-profit partner agencies providing these services.

Thus shelters, crisis intervention, and other support services that serve survivors of interpersonal violence, including domestic violence, child abuse, human trafficking and elder abuse, may remain open during the shelter-in-place orders, and staff of organizations providing these services can travel to and from work under the orders.

4. If I need to leave my residence because of domestic or other interpersonal violence, where can I go?

Answer: Several resources remain open to assist survivors of domestic or other interpersonal violence and their loved ones.

The Alameda County Family Justice Center (“ACFJC”) is currently open and provides services and support to individuals and families who have experienced domestic violence, sexual assault and exploitation, child abuse, elder and dependent adult abuse, and human trafficking. Free services provided by the ACFJC include assistance with restraining orders, case management, safety planning, shelter/housing assistance, and Medi-Cal and CalFRESH application assistance. More information on the services available at the ACFJC can be obtained on their website available here, by searching your web browser for “Alameda County Family Justice Center,” or by calling any of the below phone numbers:

Note that these resources provide services to all individuals, regardless of immigration status.

5. Can I seek a temporary restraining order (TRO) while the shelter-in-place orders are in effect?

Answer: Yes. Residents may leave their homes to avoid domestic or other interpersonal violence, and to engage in activities essential to their health and safety or the health and safety of their family or household members. Leaving one's residence to seek legal relief from domestic or other interpersonal violence is therefore consistent with the shelter-in-place orders. Individuals can obtain assistance with their temporary restraining orders (TROs) by contacting the Alameda County Family Justice Center at (510) 267-8801.

Please be aware that the Alameda County Superior Court has reduced its operations during the COVID-19 public health emergency, and at present, individuals can only seek temporary restraining orders by submitting the required filings at the drop box located at the public entrance to the Rene C. Davidson Courthouse in Oakland or the drop box located at the public entrance to the Hayward Hall of Justice. Court staff will contact you once your TRO has been ruled on and is ready for pickup. Completed TROs are available for pickup at the Hayward Hall of Justice. Additional information may be found on the Court's website.

6. I had a temporary restraining order (TRO) prior to the shelter in place declaration and I am worried it has since expired. What should I do?

Answer: Your order may still be valid and in place. On March 17, 2020 the Alameda County Superior Court ordered that already-issued TROs that were set to expire between March 17 and April 3 were extended by a period of 30 days from the date on which they otherwise would have expired.⁸ On April 3, 2020, the Alameda County Superior Court announced that it was further extending all TROs that would otherwise expire between April 4 and May 24 by a period of 30 days from the date on which they would otherwise expire.⁹ You can find the relevant order from the Alameda County Superior Court extending deadlines here, and on the Alameda County Superior Court’s website. Please consult the Alameda County Superior Court’s website for the latest guidance on the Court’s operations during the shelter-in-place orders.

This means that if you had a restraining order from a local court before March 17, 2020, and it says on the order that it is supposed to expire any time before May 24, you can expect that your order has been extended.

The Oakland Police Department is aware of the Superior Court’s orders extending the validity of TROs that are set to expire between March 17 and May 24, and will act in accordance with the Court’s orders and applicable state law.

7. I am not experiencing violence personally, but I believe I can hear a person or animal being abused. What can I do to help?

If you believe that a friend, family member, or neighbor is in imminent physical danger, please call 9-1-1. For non-emergencies, you can contact the Oakland Police Department non-emergency line at (510) 777-3333. You can also call the Alameda County Family Justice Center at (510) 267-8800 and the services identified in FAQ # 5 for further guidance on how to help neighbors or loved ones who may be experiencing domestic violence. Additional online resources are available on the websites for the National Domestic Violence Hotline and the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

8. If I call the police because I or someone I know is being abused, will they ask about my immigration status?

The entities issuing these FAQs cannot give any person legal advice regarding their individual potential justice system involvement. However, the Oakland Police Department will not attempt to check the immigration status of any person calling to report domestic violence. In addition, the Oakland Police Department takes incidents of domestic and other interpersonal violence seriously, and their priority is to protect survivors of violence, including by ensuring that survivors can request police assistance without fear.
